

FAWN'S JUSTICE

A Crime Drama by Todd Bull & Olivia Reedy

It's never too late to heal the heart you left behind.

FBI agent Fawn Redfern, half Kirolowa Indian, returns home to Northern California to investigate the murder of her estranged father, the tribal chief, only to find the trail leads to the serial killer her lover has been chasing for years.

Plot

As an FBI agent, Fawn Redfern's career is on the skids. Her lover and mentor in the Bureau, Dane Scott, has betrayed her after a Congressman is killed in a brutal slaying right under the Bureau's watchful eye in San Francisco. As she is fired, Fawn also gets the news that her estranged father, Kirolowa Tribal Chief Dan Redfern, has been murdered. Her half-brother's heart wrenching plea is that the tribe not only needs her expertise, they want her to run for county Sheriff. Though the choice is difficult, Fawn agrees.

As Redwood County Sheriff, Fawn attempts to find the answers to her father's death and assimilate into the tribe she never knew, though she's unaware that she hasn't been given the total picture by the Kirolowas. Things get complicated when Dane informs her the Bureau believes she is on the trail of a serial killer - one who is already supposed to be in prison.

Fawn's struggles to solve the murders lead her to more questions than answers about her tribal roots. All the while, she is dealing with troubling supernatural visions she can't explain. She fears that she has inherited her caucasian mother's mental illness. With the help of her Tolowa grandmother, Gram, the tribal shaman, Fawn pieces together the clues to the crimes as well as the mystery of her place in the world.

Fawn's investigative efforts allow an innocent man to be freed from prison, uncover the truth about the serial Seashell Killer, and expose the widescale racketeering and money laundering that sullies certain members of the Tolowa tribe. But Fawn's greatest win is the discovery that her parents truly loved and accepted her.
